

Leaflet Corporation Receives United States Patent for Document Creation Software

CANTON, MASSACHUSETTS, UNITED STATES, May 3, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Leaflet Corporation, a leading innovator and provider of document automation and contract lifecycle management (CLM) software, announced today that it has been granted United States Patent #11468245 for its innovative document drafting functionality.

The patent is a significant milestone for Leaflet Corporation and underscores our commitment to innovation and providing our customers with cutting-edge solutions.

The patent covers Leaflet Corporation's proprietary technology that makes it easy for users to draft simple and complex documents using precedent clauses based on user preferences. The platform also includes intuitive questionnaire-based input, no code template automation, pre-defined and ad hoc workflows, robust review processing, and post execution management features.

Leaflet Corporation has a long history of innovation and a commitment to advancing the contract management industry. We believe that this patent will provide significant value to our customers and support our position as a leader in our industry.

"We are thrilled to receive this patent. Our software has helped businesses around the world improve their document creation process, and this patent is a testament to the hard work and dedication of our team, our commitment to innovation, and providing our customers with the best possible solutions," said Sam Muthusamy, Founder and CEO of Leaflet Corporation.

Leaflet Corporation's document creation software (Leaflet Draft™) is available through its new OEM program, which allows other document solutions and automation platforms to integrate these components into their own products.
